

“My Community is Having Meetings About Me Without Me”

80% of Tennessee's working parents report inadequate access to childcare.

12.5% of the US population has a disability.

15% Black or African American Nashville residents lack a car.

Discussions, educational programming, and training related to equity, access, and inclusion often take place in private groups and have a limited audience.

Because of this, the community at large cannot engage in and/or learn from these activities, it slows or halts the ability to gain momentum in the discussion and momentum for change is lost.

The Solution - TownHallPass

TownHallPass creates an online and accessible community where Nashville area residents can participate equally to discussions related to equity, justice, and inclusion. It supplies organizations and community groups with the expertise and infrastructure needed to make that process a success.

Organization Benefits

 The TownHallPass platform encourages sharing of content including writing, audio, and video for upcoming or past activities.

Social Content

 TownHallPass members can share and manage calendar information for virtual and in-person events, including registration and tickets.

Community Calendar

 Communicate via public or private channels without advertisements or having “bad actors” pollute the discussions.

Communication and Messaging

Community Benefits

Centralized Community Calendar Search through events posted by all member orgs/groups to find ones that interest you.

Content Archive Couldn't attend in-person and/or virtually? No problem. Search for and engage with content at your own pace.

Search and Discover Looking for particular subject matter in all activities? Utilize the search and hashtag functions to find events and content related to your interests.

Partner Profile Pages Want to dig deeper? All content comes from the pages of individual organizations and groups. Visit their THP profiles to get more info and reach out.
